AAAR Code of Conduct

The American Association for Aerosol Research (AAAR) cares about both the professional development and the personal well-being of its members and affiliates. Accordingly, in all interactions related to AAAR, including publication in and review for Aerosol Science and Technology, participation in AAAR governance, and attendance of the annual meeting, participants are expected to be respectful of and considerate to each other and act in a professional manner. AAAR members shall avoid plagiarism, provide proper attribution to previous work, utilize technology appropriately, and properly acknowledge the contributions of all collaborators.

During the annual meeting, all participants, including registered attendees, exhibitors, service providers, and association management staff, are expected to follow the guidelines outlined in this Code of Conduct and obey rules enacted by the meeting venue, affiliated hotels, or other locations related to AAAR activities in which they are engaged. Individuals are expected to refrain from:

- Making verbal comments inappropriate in tone or content;
- Including inappropriate material in plenary, platform, or poster presentations;
- Engaging in physically intimidating or frightening behavior including, threatening, stalking, harassment, or abuse;
- Disrupting presentations or events affiliated with the conference; and
- Participating in illegal activities.

Anyone requested to cease unacceptable behavior must comply immediately. At the annual meeting, individuals who fail to comply may be removed without warning or refund and may be prohibited from attending future meetings.

Inappropriate behavior during AAAR-related activities at any time may result in loss of membership. Any form of retaliation related to complaints associated with the Code of Conduct is strictly prohibited. In addition to standards of interpersonal conduct, AAAR emphasizes compliance of all applicable federal and state antitrust laws. Members, including corporate/industrial partners, must refrain from any practices that violate these laws.

If you observe unacceptable behavior during activities related to AAAR, notify a staff member of the AAAR management company or a member of the AAAR Executive Committee or Board of Directors. If you observe behavior that constitutes a threat to public safety, contact 911 immediately.
